The Importance of Diaries and Journals

May Woolsey kept a diary and historians were able to learn about her life from this diary. Her diary told about her life from her point of view. Historians were able to learn May’s likes and dislikes, what her everyday life was like, and what she thought and dreamed about. Diary’s and journals are a way for us to record our own history. We can talk about our everyday life, our dreams, and event major events that are happening in the world around us. By writing down these events in a journal or diary, we are able to talk about our experiences using our own words. In the future, you can look back at these experiences or your children or grand-children or historians many years in the future.
